

Review: Darlene Love wows audience on 'Christmas (Baby Please Come Home)'

Posted Dec 20, 2014 by Markos Papadatos

Rock and Roll Hall of Famer Darlene Love performed her holiday classic on "The Late Show with David Letterman" for the final time.

It is safe to say that Love left the audience breathless: they were in total awe of her tremendous pipes and superb vocal ability. This performance on Letterman's show has become an annual tradition for her and the show for well over two decades. 28 years to be exact.

Love was backed by a full orchestra, and she looked stunning in her elegant red dress. David Letterman's band leader and musical director Paul Shaffer accompanied her on piano. Her dynamic vocal performance went on to earn her a deserving standing ovation.

Darlene blows away the crowd with her final Late Show performance of "Christmas (Baby Please Come Home)."

Courtesy Late Show with David Letterman

"Darlene Love, ladies and gentlemen," acclaimed TV host David Letterman exclaimed.

"Thank you so much. It has been a great pleasure. God bless you, my dear."

To check out Digital Journal's interview with Darlene Love, click here.

The Verdict

Overall, the emotion, soul and power in Darlene Love's voice resonated well with the Late Show with David Letterman audience and the viewers that tuned in at home. It is evident that Love only gets better with age, proving that she has one of the most enduring voices out there. She is truly like fine wine, and one of rock and roll's greatest treasures. Her version of "Christmas (Baby Please Come Home)" earned 5 out of 5 stars.

For more information on Rock and Roll Hall of Famer Darlene Love, check out her official website.

Darlene blows away the crowd with her final Late Show performance of "Christmas (Baby Please Come Home)."

Courtesy Late Show with David Letterman